CRRSAA

The method used to determine which students receive Emergency Financial Aid Grants and how much they would receive under CRRSAA was a formulaic calculation.

Undergraduate students with an Expected Family Contribution (EFC) between $0 - $5,702 and were enrolled in at least 6 credits in both fall and spring semester in academic year 2020-2021 received

$1,500, if enrolled in one semester the award was $750. Undergraduate students with an EFC between $5,703 - $9,999 and were enrolled for at least 6 credits in both fall or spring semester in academic year 2020-2021 received $700, if enrolled in one semester the award was $350.

Graduate students with an EFC of $0 - $9,999 and were enrolled for at least credits in two semesters in academic year 2020-2021 received $700, if enrolled in one semester the award was $350.

Student eligibility for purposes of the formulaic calculation was done prior to the Department of Education expanding eligibility. For the remainder of CRRSAA funds available, after the allocation using the formulaic method, we have awarded funds to eligible students who have informed the University of their extenuating and excessive financial hardship.

The following is what we informed our students via email who received a CRRSAA award:

ARP

The methods used to determine which students receive Emergency Financial Aid Grants and how much they would receive under ARP were a formulaic calculation and an application process.

Formulaic calculation: The awards using the formulaic calculations were based on a combination of factors that include financial criteria (Expected Family Contribution as determined by the FAFSA, financial hold and outstanding balance indicators), academic level, cumulative grade point average, class level, first-generation college status, enrollment status as well as additional weighting for students ineligible to file a FAFSA and reduced weighting for students who receive tuition remission or tuition exchange support or who are part of a direct billing program for their tuition charges.

The following is what we informed our students via email who received an ARP formulaic award:

You have been awarded a Higher Education Emergency Relief Fund (HEERF III) student grant. These funds are part of the American Rescue Plan which provides support to institutions of higher education to ensure learning continues during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Application process: The application process was for currently enrolled students who experienced financial hardship related to any component of the student's cost of attendance or for emergency costs that arose due to coronavirus, such as tuition, food, housing, health care (including mental health care) or childcare. Students who were currently enrolled in a degree program at Western New England University were eligible for the application process.
